MASTERCLASS OUTLINE

This masterclass will examine how as a coach (or coaching leader) you can better understand, support and guide those whose roles, circumstances or choices require them to work with the unfamiliar, lead in the unknown or engage with the culturally, personally and/or socially challenging.

It will draw on the experiences and insights of people who have worked across and beyond.

MASTERCLASS AIMS AND OBJECTIVES:

As a coach (coaching leader) this masterclass will help you improve how you:

- connect with, support and coach clients who are working in the different and the unfamiliar;
- facilitate your client's development of curiosity, awareness and sensitivity for difference, cross boundary engagement and inclusion;
- encourage the reluctant, cautious or doubting to engage, work well with and envision the possibilities and value offered by different futures;
- help the dedicated, enthusiastic or unquestioning to navigate the unfamiliar with growing insight, wisdom and judgement.

MASTERCLASS CONTENT

This masterclass will cover how coaches (coaching leaders) can support their clients to:

- lead the different;
- work differently and effectively outside familiar boundaries;
- adopt a questing/exploring mentality towards unfamiliar situations and experiences;
- use core questions, insightful guides, heightened intuition and astute practices
- correct, relate and engage better to engender mutual appreciation and inclusion.

Participants will have the opportunity to work through their own example if they wish to.

DR ANTHONY KASOZI was born in East Africa, educated in Africa and Europe and has coached, consulted and worked with managers and leaders from and in Africa, America, Europe and Asia.

Educated in international relations, language, economics and finance, he is an experienced executive coach, and an organization development and management consultant, Anthony has a keen and active interest in the roles organizations and leaders in science and public service play in shaping responses to educational, community, developmental, health and change challenges facing us in a world with growing populations, resource constraints and fast changing technologies. Anthony is married with close family in Europe and Africa.
