Team Coaching: What The Literature Doesn't Tell You

Allard de Jong, PCC & Georgina Woudstra, MCC

Date: Friday 14th May 2021 (Half Day)

Venue: Online Zoom Platform

Timings: 2.00pm to 5.00pm

MASTERCLASS OUTLINE

The big problems of the world can only be solved through brilliant collaboration. We know there's a huge role for team coaching in enabling this. Hence our profession is exploding, thought leaders abound and it seems like new insights are published every month. But as practitioners we have found that these do not always reflect the messy reality of team coaching - even less so in a virtual world of distributed teams. In this interactive and experiential session we'll explore several of these discoveries. We will delve into coaching with courage and "sitting in the fire." And we'll get into the arena to practice, so put your coaching pants on.

MASTERCLASS AIMS

- Unpack the notion of Real Team Coaching.
- BE a team coach, versus DOING team coaching.
- Work flexibly and deeply and in the here-and-now with teams.
- Hold the space and contain discomfort within yourself and the team.
- Keep building confidence and competence as a team coach.
- Experience creating a virtual container.

MASTERCLASS CONTENT

- Resolving the tensions you experience as a team coach.
- Exploring fear & vulnerability as a team coaching.
- Developing your presence and capacity to stay in the moment.
- Courageously diving into the unknown of emergent team coaching.
- Practice, practice, practice.
- And doing so while coaching virtually!

ALLARD DE JONG, PCC is an ICF certified coach (PCC) and certified mentor coach, trainer and facilitator. His basic training was with CTI and he holds a master's degree in communication studies from the university of California. He has been working with leaders and their teams since 2001 on all 5 continents. Lately he has focused his efforts on bringing people together online one-on-one and in teams and engaging them in effective virtual conversations, in both facilitation and coaching settings.

GEORGINA WOULDSTRA MCC is the Founder and Principal of the Team Coaching Studio, an organisation dedicated to the professionalising team coaching and to the developing of excellent Real Team Coaches worldwide. The Team Coaching Studio developed the TCS Team Coaching Competencies, which sits at the heart of their approach, once which advocates the power of a coaching mindset and presence in team coaching.

Her first degree was in fashion design and it revealed her innate ability to notice patterns and foresee trends. An entrepreneurial streak combined with this pioneering nature, led her to create and build several cutting-edge businesses over the course of her career.

She discovered coaching in the early 1990's when conducting her research for a Masters in Change Management. The very nature of coaching spoke deeply to her love of learning, her desire for personal growth and self-actualisation, and her appetite for business. She began her coaching practice in 1993, and she has since become of one the UK's leading CEO & Top Team Coaches.
